About Mark Kalderon

Mark is a partner in our financial institutions sector group. His clients include a number of the largest global commercial and investment banks.

Mark focuses on banking and investment firm regulation. He acts for clients on market and conduct of business issues (for both wholesale and retail markets) and prudential regulation, including capital adequacy.

He also advises financial institutions on a range of wholesale market activities, including custody, repo, securities lending and prime brokerage. His practice covers drafting documentation in these areas, as well as legal and regulatory advice. He also advises a number of clients in the private wealth management sector on issues ranging from product regulation to consumer credit lending.

His practice is global in scope and he has practised in the firm's New York, Tokyo and Hong Kong offices.
